

Credit Suisse Group to Change Stock Option Practices: Will Begin Expensing Options and Reduce Level of Options Outstanding

Zurich, August 5, 2003 – The Board of Directors of Credit Suisse Group has decided to adopt a fair value method of expensing future option awards as of the financial year 2003 and to modify its practice with regard to the use of options.

Option awards will continue to be part of Credit Suisse Group's compensation plans as a means of aligning employee and shareholder interests and retaining key personnel, but at a lower level than in recent years.

Moreover, to further reduce the current level of options outstanding, the Board has decided to launch an Option Reduction Program. This program will allow current employees to exchange their eligible vested options originally granted on or after December 31, 1999, with an exercise price equal to or greater than CHF 60 for their choice of new options, restricted or phantom shares, or a 50/50 combination thereof. It also allows them to exchange their eligible vested options with an exercise price greater than CHF 30 and less than CHF 60 for restricted or phantom shares. The offer will be a value-for-value exchange under applicable accounting rules, which means that, on a grant-by-grant basis, the aggregate value of new options and/or restricted or phantom shares granted to each participant will be equal to the aggregate value of the participant's eligible options surrendered in the offer.

The option valuations will be based on the Black-Scholes option-pricing model, using assumptions that are consistent with the principles utilized for the preparation of Credit Suisse Group's pro-forma option expense disclosures in the notes to the Credit Suisse Group's annual consolidated financial statements. The exercise price of the new options issued in the offer will be 10% above the market price of Credit Suisse Group's shares on the SWX Swiss Exchange on the valuation date (which is expected to be September 5, 2003), and the restricted and phantom shares issued in the offer will be granted at the market price of Credit Suisse Group's shares on the SWX Swiss Exchange on the valuation date. The new options will have a term of seven years, which is shorter than the original term of previously issued options. The new options and restricted or phantom shares issued in the exchange offer will be either unvested or blocked (i.e. subject to transfer restrictions) for one year.

In addition, Credit Suisse Group will introduce three-year vesting for all option awards granted in future compensation cycles. For future stock awards, Credit Suisse First Boston will also introduce three-year vesting in line with industry practice in investment banking, while Credit Suisse Financial Services and the Group Corporate Center will continue to vest stock awards at grant with a four-year blocking period.

The financial statement impact of these decisions will be to expense issued options at fair value as they vest over the three-year period, starting in 2004. For Credit Suisse First Boston stock awards starting in 2003, these awards will also be expensed as vested – beginning in 2004 – resulting in the deferred recognition of the related compensation cost.
